No steam.Q: IE being slow to execute more than once I have a selenium test runner in a window, that opens 2 other chrome windows, and then the firefox should open, and then open an IE window. The test runner opens 1 by 1. The chrome windows opens ok, but the IE window wait till the 2nd chrome window closes, or the test runner closes. For example, I'm waiting for 20 seconds to check if the IE window is loading, but it keeps showing loading for many seconds more. (I'm still playing with the timeout. I don't want to wait more than 15 seconds). This is my current code: browser = selenium.create_driver("://chromedriver", "firefox") browser.maximize_window() browser.get("") driver = browser.driver #This is the part that opens chrome for accessing to our website. #I expect an wait till IE opens for checking login wait = WebDriverWait(driver, 20) wait.until(EC.element_to_be_clickable(By.ID, "user_login")) # If the IE is still not loading, I expect to exit so I can run the Selenium test runner try: login = browser.find_element_by_id("user_login") login.send_keys("My User Name") login.submit() # I expect an wait till IE opens to check if the website is loading wait.until(EC.presence_of_element_located((By.ID, "user_login_message"))) # I expect to get an error if the website is not loading e79caf774b

Q: Did you know that Aristotle was originally a Pythagorean? I didn't know this. Does anyone else know it? Is it true? A: The short version: yes. You need to read wikipedia's comment section for the long version. Aristotle received his early education from his father Nicomachus, who gave him a formal education in rhetoric, grammar and education. He also received a more informal education in these same subjects from Asclepius, who was a prominent sophist. For most of his life, Aristotle had no formal education, and was not a member of the sophists' Academy. It has been suggested, although no one agrees, that a school with Asclepius as its founder operated in the Hermus valley in the early 4th century BC. However, in late antiquity, after the exile of the Academy, he became associated with Pythagoreans, and for this reason he was viewed as more of a Pythagorean than a true philosopher. It was once believed that he had received his education at a school of Pythagorean philosophy, but this is not true. Aristotle is not known to have been a member of the Lyceum, nor was he a member of the Stoa. From the time of his arrival in Athens and despite the fact that he was the tutor of Alexander, Aristotle did not interact with the Platonic school. If you want a more clear description of Aristotle's teachings then you might read the work of Aristotle's student Theophrastus. Aristotle presented the works of his students as his own; hence the work of Theophrastus is still called Aristotle's 'works'. Q:
