EPLAN_Fluid_Hose_Configurator_2.7.iso I expect it to be of the same file size as this: .rw0 BWw.cr I've tried a few things. I've tried using the find command, but it ignores lines that end in a backslash, so I can't specify the period. I've tried running it from the bash shell, but I get the exact same result. There are some posts out there with similar issues, but none of them seem to be able to solve it with the way I'm trying. Any help would be greatly appreciated. A: Use this instead: tail -f -n +"$(expr $filesize - 2)" file | sed -n '/.*\.rdf$/ {p}' > /tmp/output It works because the expression '$filesize' contains the value of $filesize minus 2 bytes. You can use the above, or directly incorporate this into your find command, see here for find. In awk, I would do something like this (again, adjust for your specific file size): awk -v filesize=$(expr $filesize - 2) '/.*\.rdf$/ {print substr($0, 1, filesize) }' /path/to/file I generally use awk because it is a very concise way to express what could get much longer with sed. Economics courses The dynamics of the global economy have profound and long-lasting effects on society at all levels. Demand on the labour market for qualified staff affects the collective bargaining power of the workforce, and consequently labour costs, wages, and the overall economic well-being of the country. It is therefore only natural that the analysis and comprehension of market and economic trends can have a direct impact on the educational system and its goals. The MBA in Economics at SFU offers undergraduate and post-graduate students a unique opportunity to experience the science of economics and the economic policy making process. This rigorous theoretical and practical training in economics not only helps students develop a deep understanding of the economy, but also teaches them to be effective communicators and persuasive analysts of the issues and problems. Through classwork, research projects, and internships, students have the chance to gain valuable in-depth knowledge in
